

The theme for the competition is international veterinary medicine. Entries should capture efforts to improve animal health, public health or wildlife/ ecosystem health; food security (sustainable production systems); food safety; capacity building; animal welfare; or biological threat reduction. Any other subjects relating to international veterinary medicine will be considered.

First place will win $1000 USD.

Two runners up will receive $500 USD each.

Entries accepted 1 May – 15 August, 2016.

Veterinary, undergraduate and postgraduate/graduate students are welcome to participate.

Follow the link below to enter and for additional details.

Enter Below

<http://www.vet.k-state.edu/international/index.html>