Resources

- Free Coursera Course

Global Health at the Human-Animal-Ecosystem Interface
 University of Geneva
 COURSE
 4.7 (72) | 3.5K students
 INTERMEDIATE

Who is this class for: This MOOC is open and free to follow for everyone with an interest in Global Health at the Human-Animal-Ecosystem Interface. This MOOC is proposed in English with subtitles in English, French and Chinese. More specifically, this MOOC is particularly relevant for Masters and PhD students, researchers and health professionals from the human, animal and environmental sector. This MOOC is based on the One Health approach and it brings together a large diversity of experts from different backgrounds but at the same time it should also bring together a large diversity of learners (e.g. clinicians, public health experts, epidemiologists, vets, ecologists etc.).

Resources

Opportunities: Be a Mentor!

- Colleagues
  - Writing assistance
- Students

Basic requirements to be a mentor include:
 a) completion of Masters, DVM, PhD, MD, etc.
 b) past or present experience working (research, education, coordination of One Health programs for students, etc.) in the One Health Field.

We will be matching mentors and mentees based on areas of interest in the One Health field. Once matched, mentors and mentees will set three meetings via phone or Skype January-May 2019. Further contact will be encouraged but will be at the discretion of the mentor and student.

Mapping OH-SS Actors Small Working Group (MAWG)
Co-Chairs
 Bernardo Moreno Peniche - bermorenop@gmail.com
 Helena Chapman - hchapman@gmail.com

Goal:

- The mapping actors working group (MAWG) focuses on exploring the scope of OH activities across disciplines, sectors, and geographies. The MAWG aims to establish a formal list of active social science stakeholders in OH education, community practice and research, which can expand the current scope and increase the audience size of the OH community.

Purpose:

- By establishing networks with other OH social scientists, formal collaborations can be encouraged for the development of research proposals, community initiatives, and publications.

Objectives:

- To finalize a list of social science actors in OH education, community practice, and research.
- To strengthen the network of social scientists across disciplines, sectors, and geographies.
- To investigate local, national, and international agencies, organizations, and universities that promote the OH approach in social science research.
